Dissertation: The Mechanical Mirror: An Exploration of Literary and Cinematic Serialism in the Twentieth Century.

This dissertation is an examination of mass production's influence on art in the 20th Century. Whether it be knowledge of acoustics in the construction of ancient Greek theatres or the invention of the printing press, technological progress has always preceded and enabled contemporaneous art forms. In other words, technology creates the (aesthetic) culture. I argue that serialized literature spawned from mass production and naturally references said production. I begin by examining the films of Charlie Chaplin, in which the camera is imbued in his jerky gait and other movements to ultimately reveal his films' technological construction. He is even allegorized as a film strip in Modern Times. I then examine the works of Quentin Tarantino, arguing that mass production has an effect so strong on our unconscious minds that we tend to impose a lens of serialism on non-serialized works.

Teaching Experience

American University of Armenia

Yerevan, Armenia

08/22 - Present

Associate Professor of English

- EC 299: Capstone

This is a senior-level course administered very similar to an independent study. Instructors lead their students’ capstone projects (a senior thesis) in this course modeled after typical graduate theses courses in which a major professor “leads” the project.

- EC 290: Research Methods

This course is a preparatory course for the above “Capstone” class. It covers an array of quantitative and qualitative research topics with a particular focus on various methodologies typically used within the Humanities and Social Sciences. Students develop their idea for the capstone and the method by which they will research that idea in this course.

- EC 265: Language of Film

This was a course largely dedicated to film theory. It progressed somewhat along the lines of a “history of cinema” (roughly screening a movie from each decade going back to cinema’s conception). The focus of the course, however, was on film theory and analysis rather than simply historical study. It, for example, incorporated theorists from Christian Metz to Slavoj Žižek.

- EC 238: Media and Society

This course was a deep-dive into the field of Media Studies. It covered an array of theories (cultivation theory, third person effect, etc.) and theorists (including McLuhan, Chomsky, etc.) by connecting them to contemporary media news stories and other productions.

- EC 104: Introduction to Communication

As an introductory class to communication and the larger English and Communication major, this course was something of a survey course to the field of communications broadly conceived. We discussed topics ranging from paralinguistic communication to cognitive biases.

- CHSS 251: Topics in Cinema

This Gen-Ed course was designed around documentary films. It was structured as a transdisciplinary course such that various fields (ranging from ludology to criminology) were taught alongside films related to the field at hand. The final project had the students make a documentary within a group.

- HHM 351: Communications Bootcamp (for Hospitality)

This was an intensive six-week “bootcamp” course on communication for hospitality students. It taught various communication topics within the context and using examples from contemporary hospitality studies

Alfaisal University

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia

08/19 – 08/22

Assistant Professor of English

- World Literature and Film

This course focuses on teaching various cultural theories through the exploration of world literature and film. It is a survey course that is modified each semester it is taught to include works from a broad range of world English.

- Advanced Technical Writing

This course was an advanced-level technical writing course, with two distinct sections tailored to engineering and business students. It used a project-based curriculum that required students present a written and oral entrepreneurial project.

- Medical English

This course taught English in medical and public health contexts. It also aimed to increase medical students' familiarity with medical written language and discourse in different medical contexts.

- Introductory Composition I and II

These courses comprised the two semester FYE series for students at the university. It taught basic composition and rhetorical principles in a writing intensive environment via CLIL (content and language integrated learning). The sections were adjusted by student major and English proficiency level (from ESL learners to native speakers).

Other Responsibilities

- Online Transition Head for Technical Writing and FYI

Transitioned four different English courses to online modules in lieu of the COVID epidemic within a week, further refining the courses through the end of the Spring 2020 semester and completely revamping all courses for online instruction for the following Fall.

- Research Committee Head

Headed the Department of Humanities and Social Science (DHSS) Research Committee, including reviewing individual proposals and preparing annual reviews of the college research efforts.

- Scheduling Committee Head

Headed the Scheduling Committee for the department, coordinating course times, locations, and instructors for each semester.

- Course Proposals

Initiated proposals to add additional literature and film courses for upcoming semesters.

Led the curricular side of development for the newly formed Transdisciplinary Studies in Technology (TST) program and major in the Purdue Polytechnic Institute. Developed and researched competencies for this CBE program as well assessing artifacts and portfolios for competency-based credit. Further developed, led, and taught competency-related seminars for the program (see below).

-Food and Technology

This course studied the topic of food from as many disciplinary angles as possible. Using the UN's Global Challenge list, students were tasked with two major projects: the first was to use CAD software to make a mold for cookware that could be used in impoverished areas. The second was to use supply-chain management technology to logistically solve a food or water crisis.

-Cross-Cultural Collaboration for Social Change: Peru (Maymester 2018)

This study abroad course was developed with faculty from Universidad de Ingeniería y Tecnología (UTEC) in Lima, Peru. It will be a design-based course tasking students from both Purdue and UTEC to improve upon some public region in Peru (with a cultural awareness). Students will present their project at the Polytechnic Summit that runs during our stay.

-Space and Design (Spring 2018)

This course explores the theme of space from a transdisciplinary perspective. It begins with an architectural focus, including material on Foucauldian disciplinary power to blueprinting. It also incorporated such software as Revit for BIM. It then explored urban design and city space. This module incorporated such programs as Grasshopper. Finally, it concluded with virtual space and modelling said space, using programs like Houdini, Lightcraft, and Unity.

-Senior Capstone for TST Students (Fall 2017)

This is the senior capstone course for all TST students. It was co-run with and incorporated all projects proposed by organizations for Mechanical Engineering Technology (MET), Electrical and Computer Engineering Technology (ECET), and Manufacturing Engineering Technology (MFET) capstone projects. Sponsor organizations include University departments, private entrepreneurs, industry, and various government entities.

-Playgrounds and Design (Fall 2017)

This was an introductory designed-based course centered on the theme of playgrounds. Students were tasked to make iterative designs of a piece of playground equipment, modifying each subsequent design according to an array of technical and humanities readings.

- Design Portfolio (Fall 2017)

This course centered on earning the TST competencies. It worked towards the cultivation of an academic portfolio to showcase these competencies while reflecting upon these prior learning experiences.

-Bridging Cultural Spaces: Cuba (Maymester 2017)

This transdisciplinary study abroad course to Cuba was for two weeks. It centered on the theme of space -- exploring how space plays a role in society from such diverse perspectives as Building and Construction Management, Architecture, Psychology, and Humanities.

-Cyborgs and Design (Fall 2016-Spring 2017)

This two-semester course focuses on human-machine interaction. Exploring material ranging from science-fiction films to how Google affects our memory, this transdisciplinary course examines and teases the fine line between human and machine.

-Other Responsibilities

-Revised the final version of the current competencies used in Purdue's first competency-based degree program (TST).

-Conducted a triangulation study of the Polytech's TST competencies with Purdue's Core Competencies and the AAC&U value rubrics.

-Met with marketing to advise the creation of numerous marketing materials for the TST program.

-Represented TST at the Recruitment, Retention, and Diversity meeting, while further attending a number of recruitment events.

-Worked on Yield activities for the TST degree.

-Ran TST sessions at all camps offered through the Polytech.

-Headed the study abroad team for the Transdisciplinary Studies program, creating two unique courses.

Visiting Assistant Professor /Faculty Fellow

05/15-05/16

Designed multiple trans-disciplinary seminars in the Polytechnic Institute.

-Trade-Offs (Spring 2016)

This transdisciplinary course explored choices through the perspective of trade-offs. Trade-offs were explored in such disciplines as economics, communication, and film.

-Hygiene and Design (Fall 2016)

With a nod towards The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation's "Reinvent the Toilet Challenge," this course examined hygiene and the need for design revolutions around the world, particularly those with cultural and societal awareness.

-Sense and Space (Spring 2015)

Beginning from a Foucauldian angle, this course examined space from an array of humanities perspectives. It then incorporated architecture and Building and Construction Management lessons for a practical dimension.

Further Details

-Co-taught with various instructors from such diverse departments as Communication, Electrical Engineering, Library Sciences, Computer Graphics Technology, and Building and Construction Management.

-Incorporated various elements of both Visual Studies and Computer Graphics Design (CGT).

-Worked with the Communications Department to organize "live" speech events for the class.

-Held weekly conferences with all students in the class.

Post-Doc Faculty Fellow

05/14-05/15

- Was one of 16 faculty fellows who proposed a transdisciplinary degree at Purdue.
- Helped design a competency-based degree program within the College of Technology.
- Designed English-related competencies for the above program's four-year path.
- Worked with recruitment: running multiple outreach programs such as WOWiT, and DOiT.
- Regularly met with the Provost's Office to implement competency-based classes.
- Regularly met with the Financial Aid Office to align competencies to financial aid requirements.
- Mentored a group of incoming students each week.
- Met with various department heads to incorporate guest lecturers/future fellows into the plan.
- Proposed future classes for the Polytech Program.
- Designed several "pathways" (course requirements) for types of trans-disciplinary degrees (ex. Programming and Game Studies, Health and Technology, etc.)

Holacracy Secretary

- Called bi-weekly meetings for the faculty fellows of Purdue Polytech.
- Ensured said meetings followed the Holacracy-style meeting criteria.
- Kept records of the meetings' relevant developments.
- Maintained a list of all operational elements with relevance to the Holacracy design.
- Interpreted the acting governance of the circle upon request.

Purdue English Department West Lafayette, IN

08/09 – 05/14

Introduction to Film and Literature (English 286)

- Lectured on film history from Lumière to contemporary films.
- Instructed on film theory using diverse sources such as Eisenstein and Metz.
- Utilized visual theory to compose, assign, and grade various assignments on film criticism.
- Orchestrated additional screenings on campus of classic films.

Business and Technical Writing (English 420)

- Taught document design in such programs as InDesign and FrontPage.
- Spearheaded an entrepreneurship project for business majors.
- Instructed on various topics of international business culture and globalization.
- Used Rhetoric Society of America lectures to expand the discussion on professional writing.

Introductory Composition (English 106)

- Autonomously planned and instructed various sections of the class.
- Taught various aspects of composition and argumentation in the context of rhetorical theory.
- Held weekly one-on-one conferences with students.
- Taught specialized sections based in popular culture.

Southern Illinois University
Edwardsville, IL

08/07 – 05/09

Introductory Composition I and II (English 101 & 102)

- Independently instructed and graded sections of English 101 & 102 (Introductory Composition).
- Developed lesson plans, grading rubrics, and assignments for each semester.
- Taught reading comprehension, critical analysis, analytical and argumentative techniques.
- Prepared students for a final portfolio analysis.
- Taught such diverse writers as Shakespeare, Tom Stoppard, Ikku Jippensha, John Donne, Sigmund Freud, Edmund, Burke, and e.e. cummings.

Academic Service / Volunteer Work

TedTalk Spring 2024

- Presented “Why you keep rewatching the same TV show” at the AUA Tedx event.
- Won editor’s choice (the first time this occurred at AUA) and was featured on the main Ted YouTube channel.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wjFvKau-0pA>

Faculty Research Awards Committee (FRAC) (research)

- Served on the FRAC committee to distribute research funding across the university.
- Considered various grant and funding applications for other activities such as conferences and course releases.

Academic Advisor for AUA Film Society

- Helped organize screenings for the AUA Film Society, as well as connect the society to various film courses on campus.
- Helped arrange various guest speakers for the club, including a handful of actors and producers in Hollywood.

Job Search Committee Member

- Served on various job search committees, including for a Media Studies position and a Media Lab Coordinator position in Fall 2023 and Spring 2024 respectively.
- Wrote questions for the interview process.

Workshops from Spring 2023 –Spring 2025

- Conducted an array of “open workshops” for the university community, on such topics as Squid Game, Women in the Film Industry, the Culture of Thanksgiving, and Phonology and Music (adapted from my publication above).

General Education Committee

- Worked on overall program design for the General Education department.
- Aided the curriculum committee in developing specific visual arts courses.

Conducted an Open House 2024

- Presented a demonstration on film to prospective students.
- Recruited students for the English and Communication program.

Film Club Head at Alfaisal University

- Began the university’s first film club and served as faculty sponsor.
- Organized all meetings and screenings.
- Held post-screening discussions.

WALLA (Wabash Area Lifetime Learning Association) Lecturer

- Designed and taught a class on Popular Literature for individuals 50 and over.
- Compiled instruction material and handouts for participants.
- Held bi-weekly discussions on class materials.

Guest lecturer to English 554: Teaching Pedagogy for Composition

- Gave a presentation titled “Teaching Critical Analysis in a Writing Class.”

Introductory Composition Writing Showcase 2014

- Volunteered at Purdue’s annual introductory composition showcase and judged the “Best Reflection” category.

Professional Writing Showcase at Purdue 2012

- Delivered a presentation on various elements of professional writing, including digital rhetoric, leadership formation, and multimodal text production.

Helped Organize and Participated in a Graduate Theory Conference at SIUE

- Presented a paper titled “This Paper is not Signified (But the paper it is on is): A Derridean Interpretation of Natural Languages.”
- Attended graduate research presentations the following year.

Expository Writing Committee Member (SIUE)

- Developed guidelines for the portfolio system utilized in all English 101 classrooms.
- Compiled assessment examples for future instructors.
- Lectured on rhetorical principles to incoming teaching assistants.

Writing Lab Consultant (SIUE)

- Held personal conferences with students from across the university.
- Tutored for the SOAR program (Student Opportunities for Academic Results).

-Supervised Grammar modules.

Other Work Experience

Allstate Insurance

02/07 - 07/07

Northbrook, IL

Financial Analyst (for AF and ALIC)

- Developed and administered training programs for new employees
- Researched data on policy loans, annuities, T-link, bonds, and universal term life policies
- Devised, calculated, and applied run rates and various investment margin formulas
